INSTRUCTIONS AND SUGGESTIONS.

1. The state textbook is the basis for the study. These readings help to interpret and amplify it.

2. Adapt references to the child's ability to comprehend them. There are all degrees of intelligence among pupils of the same class.

3. The outline is not exhaustive. Use other books that are available.

4. Names of books are repeated and pages listed for your convenience. Topics about which much is written are not necessarily of most importance.

5. Use the topical method of recitation. Let the child tell what he has read about his topic. Do not interrupt. When he has finished, let the class ask questions and you, the teacher, do likewise. Each child's contribution to the lesson is one phase of the socialized recitation.

6. When possible connect current events with past history. At all times utilize the children's knowledge.

7. Use maps and charts.

8. Use pictures that are authentic. The stereoscope and balopticon both are helpful.

9. Pass quickly over military events. Do not try to trace campaigns.

10. Drill on essentials.

11. The greatest gain is made by the pupils when they understand and enjoy what they study. If subjects such as tariff and currency, etc., are too difficult, omit them.

12. Train the children to be loyal to our country.

METHOD OF STUDY.

In the study of the period from 1607-1789, place emphasis upon the following movements:

1. The struggle of European power to gain control of North America and the final triumph of England.

2. The development of local self-government.

3. The gradual alienation of the colonies from England, the grievances which culminated in the Revolutionary War, and the independence of the colonies.

4. The organization of a new government on the federal plan and the difficulties encountered.

5. The expansion of the original colonies to the regions beyond the Alleghany Mountains, reasons for such expansion.

During the period from 1789–1865, point out and emphasize three great movements going on simultaneously :

1. The development of a strong central government.
2. The acquisition of territory by purchase, conquest, or annexation.
3. The ethical and economical phases of the slavery question.

From 1865 to the present time, emphasize :

1. The reconstruction of the South.
2. The social and the industrial development of the nation.
3. The accumulation of capital, its use and abuse; the conflict of capital with labor.
4. Movements toward human betterment.
5. The United States a world power.

Relate all minor topics to these great movements and the children will see that history is more than a series of facts, that it is the story of the life of a people.

Constitution of the United States. (See Appendix.)
Beard & Bagley: History of the American People, 170-176.

The children should read the constitution during the period for recitation and the points in the above outline should be understood.

It is not expected that seventh grade children will remember the details of the constitution. They should appreciate the task our forefathers accomplished in framing it. Know some of its main provisions, and learn to refer to it. For a slow class simplify.

XIV. Expansion during revolutionary period.

Use outline maps of the Appalachian region and states east. Locate prominent natural features first. Allegheny, Blue Ridge, Cumberland, Smoky Mountains; Ohio, Allegheny, Monongahela, Susquehanna, Potomac, Hudson, Mohawk, Delaware, Shenandoah, Yadkin, James Rivers.

Locate Cumberland gap at junction of three states; Pittsburgh, junction of two rivers.

Locate smaller streams. Youghiogheny, Swift Run Gap, Powell, Holsten, Clinch Rivers.

Study the physiography of this region carefully. Lead the children to see the way in which mountains and rivers influence history.
